board of agriculture refused to sell the statewide prohibition amendment. The minutes of the fair board show this action:

"Moved by Mr. Williamson, seconded by Mr. Bronson, that the board of agriculture refuse to sell space on State fair grounds to Ohio Temperance union for distribution of literature, believing that the title of the organization is misleading."

The collapse of the Ohio Temperance union has come early in the campaign. This organization was formed to combat prohibition by distributing literature which pretended to show that it is un-scriptural and un-Christian to oppose the liquor traffic. Harry Probasco of Cincinnati headed the movement and early took action looking to securing space at all the fairs in the state. The name, "Ohio Temperance union," fooled some fair managers, and when they found that the union was wet, instead of dry, as its rame would indicate, they refused the union space. Now the action of the Ohio State fair board has cut the ground from under the brewers' latest scheme and left it in the air.
